ADDITIONAL COMMENTS

Commissioner Harkness stated that he had heard a lot of talk in the community implying that the Commission is trying to impose a new tax. He wants to clarify to the public that is not the case, and that the Commission is only voting tonight on allowing the citizens of Habersham County to be able to decide for themselves through an election if they wish to continue the special local option sales tax that is already in existence.

Commissioner Woodall echoed this, saying that the beauty of SPLOST is that it puts this decision in the hands of the constituents. Habersham County voters are the ones who will decide whether they approve of continuing the sales tax and the projects that it would fund.

County Manager Sims informed the Commission that he has already scheduled meetings with key community groups and leaders, including Partnership Habersham and the Chamber of Commerce, who plan to assist in promoting and getting information about SPLOST out to the voters. He reminded the Commissioners that while state law prevents local governments from directly advocating for the SPLOST, they can only educate.

Commissioner Harkness asked about the status of the animal shelter project? Mr. Sims informed him that the ground was broken last week and that current estimates are that construction will be completed in approximately 9-12 months. Mr. Sims stated that he realizes that people on social media have talked about how it has taken 5 years to get to this point, but they don't realize all that has occurred with the design, bid, location changes, land acquisition and more. Additionally, the County had to wait for the tax money to be collected.

Commissioner Tench wanted to know how the City of Cornelia was able to get away with putting a waterline down BC Grant Road when there is no known right-of-way? Mr. Sims informed Commissioner Tench he could inquire about this if he wishes.

ADJOURN

Motion by Commissioner Akins, seconded by Commissioner Meador, and voted unanimously (5-0) to adjourn the meeting at 6:10 p.m.

Respectfully Submitted,

By:
Jimmy Tench, Chairman
